PRESIDENT ASKS COUNSEL TO START 'TEAPOT' INQUIRY

WHITE HOUSE STATEMENT SAYS GUILTY SHALL BE PUNISHED.—WILL NOT PREJUDGE.

EVIDENCE GIVEN WARRANTS ACTION TAKEN COOLIDGE DECLARES

Dohney Tells Committee of $100,000 Loan to Former Secretary of Interior Fall, Formerly Laid at the Door of Sinclair.—Fall Tells Conflicting Story of Loan.—Dohney Denies Corrupt Intentions.

Washington. — President Coolidge has announced that he will employ special counsel to begin legal action to enforce the law and protect the rights of the public with respect to the leasing of the naval oil reserves. The Coolidge statement follows:

"It is not for the president to determine criminal guilt or render judgment in civil cases. That is the function of the courts. It is not for him to prejudge. I shall do neither. But when facts are revealed to me that require action for the purpose of insuring the enforcement of either civil or criminal liabilities, such action will be taken. That is the province of the executive.

"Acting under my direction, the department of justice has been observing the course of evidence which has been revealed at the hearings conducted by the senatorial committee investigating certain oil leases made on naval reserves which I believe warrant action for the purpose of enforcing the law and protecting the rights of the public. This is confirmed by reports made to me by the committee. If there has been any crime it must be prosecuted. If there has been any property of the United States illegally transferred or leased it must be recovered.

"I feel the public is entitled to know that in the conduct of such action no one is shielded for any party, political or other reason. As I understand it, men or involved who belong to both political parties and having been advised by the department of justice that it is in accord with former precedents, I propose to employ special counsel of high rank drawn from both political parties to bring such actions for the enforcement of the law.

"Counsel will be instructed to prosecute these cases in the courts so that if there is any guilt it will be punished; if there is any civil liability it will be enforced; if there is any fraud it will be revealed, and if there are any contracts which are illegal they will be cancelled.

"Every law will be enforced and every right of the people and the government will be protected."

Washington.—An amazing story of how he lent $100,000 to Albert B. Fall, then secretary of the interior, out of sympathy for an old buddy come upon hard times, and a year later obtained through Fall's department an oil lease contract which he frankly estimated would net him $100,000,000 in profits, was laid before the senate Teapot Dome investigating committee by E. L. Doheny, the oil magnate.

This disclosure produced a sensation, the like of which has seldom been experienced here, coming as it did, just ahead of the arrival of former Secretary Fall, who had been summoned to tell the truth about the loan after offering two conflicting stories previously.

It is expected to result not only in the cancellation of the Teapot Dome lease, but in the breaking of the California contracts held by Doheny.

It was a complete surprise to most of the committee, who had been trying to tack the loan onto Harry F. Sinclair, who obtained the Teapot Dome lease. But it was still apparent, after Doheny was questioned, that senators were not through with the Sinclair end of the inquiry.

Briefly, this is Doheny's story, as drawn out by the questions of the senators:

In October, 1921, Fall complained to Doheny that his Mexican holdings had been wiped out, that he had been unable to make any money out of his ranch during his term in Washington as a senator from New Mexico and secretary of the interior, that he was thinking about resigning, and that he wished he could get $100,000 to buy an adjoining ranch at Three Rivers, New Mexico. Doheny took this as a hint and offered offhand to lend Fall $100,000 on his unsecured note. Fall said he might be able to get the money from E. B. McLean, Washington publisher,

MAC DONALD URGES RHINE BUFFER AREA

AN INTERNATIONAL BOMBSHELL FLUNG BY BRITISH PREMIER

GERMAN STATE SOUGHT AS NEUTRAL TERRITORY

Offers Plan to Create Barrier For the Security of Both the Teutons and French.— Frontier to Be Defended By League Members.

Paris.—Premier Mac Donald of England flung his first international bombshell when, through Belgium as an intermediary, he proposed, unofficially, a settlement of the question of France's security by internationalizing the Rhine frontier and putting the neutral strip under the League of Nations.

The narrow, no-man's land thus created would become a literal baracade protection for both France and Germany, obliging members of the League of Nations to wage war against any nation violating its sancity.

With France's security thus guaranteed, Premier MacDonald believes the way will be open to revise the treaty of Versailles and put the whole European situation on a firm basis.

These proposals are reported to have been put forward in a secret conference which Premier MacDonald held with the Belgian ambassador in London, the reason for the detour being MacDonald's hope that Belgium will be able to persuade France to adopt the plan.

So urgent did the Belgian government consider the proposals that Foreign Minister Jasper hastened immediately from Brussels to Paris, where he had an hour and a half conference with Premier Poincare.

The strictest secrecy surrounds this conversation, but from reliable sources comes indications that the meeting was practically only concerned with the project put forward by MacDonald.

In diplomatic quarters, however, it is realized that Premier Poincare is hostile to almost any English program and that, therefore, as long as he heads the French government there is little likelihood that MacDonald's idea will bear fruit.

EXPLOSION OF GAS BURIES FORTY-ONE MINERS ALIVE

Indiana, Pa.—Forty-one miners were entombed in the Barnes Tucker mine at Shanktown, fifteen miles from here, following a gas explosion. Fourteen miners who were at work when the explosion occurred escaped unhurt. Three members af a rescue party, which penetrated the wrecked interior four hours after the blast, were overcome by after-damp and had to be rushed back to open air by their comrades. The mine rescue car of the Pittsburg station, United States bureau of mines, was hurried to Shanktown and the government rescue team entered the mine.

The bodies of thirty-one men were recovered. The bodies of five others were located by rescue crews and four men are believed entombed. No hope is held that they will be found alive.

DOUBT THAT GREER FIRED SHOT THAT WOUNDED DINES

Los Angeles.—A startling assertion by Clarence Conlin, attorney for H. A. Greer, chauffeur for Mable Normand, charged with having shot and wounded Courtland S. Dines, that Greer may not have done the shooting, despite his confession to the police, injected a new sensation into the case. Conlin is also quoted as asserting that if there was any danger of Greer being sent to San Quentin he would "have him open up and tell all he knows."

Chief of detectives, Lucas, of the district attorney's office, declared that Conlin, during a heated argument over the case, had told him that Greer did not fire the shot that wounded Dines. Lucas said Conlin based his assertion on information he had elicited from Greer.

DR. COOPER AT REST

When a highly respected and well loved citizen has answered the summons to come up higher, the only means that is left to sorrowing ones of attesting their friendship is by the gift of flowers, and attendance at the services in honor of the deceased.

So, upon last Thursday morning, the Congragational church was filled and over flowing with practically all of the older generation of Campbell, who were not confined to home by illness, assembled in respect to the memory of Charles N. Cooper. The quantities of beautiful flowers surrounding the casket and completely banking the choir loft, bore silent witness of the many whose lives had been touched by the departed.

A short service was held at the home for the family and then the very touching tributes at the church paid by Rev. W. E. Eckles, who was assisted in the services by Rev. Marshall of Sunnyvale, who has ministered often to the congregation.

Beautiful organ music, played by Mrs. G. S. Robson, added grace and another note of hope to the uplifting words of the services.

The casket was born by the loving hands of the three sons, Charles W., John H., and William Cooper; his son-in-law, Theodore Cutting, his grand son, Windsor Cutting and grandson by marriage, Edward Blair.

The final service was held at Mount Olivet where the remains were accompanied by several relatives and friends.

So has gone from among us the bodily form of another good citizen, but he himself is still here in the hearts and thoughts of his friends.

Observe Rules

There has been started again in this community what is known as the "chain letter" or "chain prayer letter." It is quite probable that some unthinking person started it but it is against the postal regulations to continue its chain because being unsigned and bearing an intimated threat. Any of our patrons getting such a letter should "break the chain" by not rewriting and thereby saving some friend worry or mental anxiety.

Rural mail boxes are for use of United States Mail service only and partieis using them for the deposit of unstamped mail circulars, calendars, etc., are violating postal laws. Nothing should be placed in these boxes except as passes thru the regular mail service channels. Box patrons should warn all offenders against this cheating of the postal department of its legitimate revenue.

Minute Men of the Constitution United in Common Bond of Patriotism

By BRIG. GEN. JOHN V. CLINNIN, Retired.

"Hell and Maria" Dawes has struck the keynote in proposing a real American organization in which all classes, colors, and creeds may join in support of the Constitution.

It is a mistake for us to think that radicalism in the United States is merely the evidence of a form of unrest which neither grows nor impresses. As a matter of fact, socialism and radicalism are carefully developed and promoted by a great organization. Soviet Russia, the land of darkness and illiteracy, has agents working with little restraint in an educational campaign, which is even carried into our schools and colleges.

The time has come when we must meet organization by counter organization. We have some in America who assume to meet the problem by intolerance. Their objective is lost in the hatred and distrust engendered.

Let us be Minute Men of the Constitution united by the common bond of patriotism. Let us again dedicate our lives, regardless of line of descent, creed, color or party, to upholding the government of the United States of America.

It should be emphasized that in our free land, with its laws made by the people and for the people, there is no place for so-called class consciousness, and that we will tolerate no government by classes.

TODAY'S THOUGHT

"It is absurd to think that one's own age of the world is beyond correction by the next age."
—James.

A POOR MAN'S TAX REVISION

In the interest of the poor man, as well as the rich man, there should be a revision downward of the income tax law. As we see the situation, the recommendations of Secretary Mellon, if acted upon favorably by congress, will prove more beneficial to the poor man than the rich man. In the first place, a revision in accordance with his recommendations will remove all the so-called nuisance taxes such as tax on theatre tickets, and numerous other small exactions. Then they will relieve the tax payers, with small incomes up to $10,000, of any direct taxation. Then again they will eliminate the effect of the pyramiding of taxes, which is particularly oppressive to the poor. Tax pyramiding results with every person, through whose hands an article passes, adding on to the price sufficient to take care of his taxes, with the result that the consumer pays the taxes of the producer and every middle man who handles the article. The result of pyramiding of taxes is somewhat responsible for the high cost of living today. Secretary Mellon's recommendations will also have the effect of diverting into productive industry of large investments which are now being made in tax exemption securities, with the result that there will be more work at better wages for laboring people. Looked at along every angle, there appears to be every reason why the whole country should get back of the recommendations of the Secretary of the Treasury and bring pressure to bear on congress to enact into legislation the practical suggestions of our able secretary of the treasury.

MINDING THE PUBLIC BUSINESS

A common retort much heard 25 years ago, among people inclined to be pert, was "Mind your own business." It seemed to be the motto of those days. It represented the period when the good citizen was supposed to stick strictly to his own work, pay his debts, keep the peace and let other people alone.

This saucy remark is not so much heard today. Perhaps it is out of date. Anyway, it has been discovered that under that old conception of community life, cities and towns were not getting things done. There was little force pushing for progress.

It was seen that if people wanted their home cities to go ahead, they must stop minding their own business exclusively, and at least give a little of their time to minding the public business and looking after their common interests as citizens. The remarkable civic progress accomplished during the past 10 years shows this new spirit.

RECORD BREAKING 1923 LUMBER PRODUCTION

Lumber mills in the Douglas fir districts of western Washington and western Oregon, continuing to operate at the remarkable rate that has prevailed for many months, had broken by November 3, 1923, the end of the forty-fourth week of the year, all records for production in the Pacific Northwest.

Every section of the west has felt the result of prosperity created by the lumber industry. Any legislation or taxation which retards investments or building operations, is immediately reflected in reduced lumber output, loss of employment and smaller payrolls.

The Lady and the Peddler

FRANK STOCKTON wrote a famous story, "The Lady and the Tiger." Our story, "The Lady and the Peddler," won't be so famous, but there's a resemblance. The tiger is a beast of of prey, and we think the peddler is too.

The peddler, so the lady reported, was trying to get orders for coffee. He argued, "Local grocers don't make any money on coffee. They load up with a lot of brands and sell them for a few cents profit, just for accommodation."

Now listen: It's true that grocers are just at present selling coffee at a low profit, but—the grocer can still live if he gets V-O-L-U M-E. One can doesn't amount to much at a profit of six cents but a hundred cans make six dollars. Volume of sales is the only compensation for LOW PROFIT—volume and still more volume.

Listen again: The peddler, between the lines, gave himself away. He implied that he did make a good profit. He proved it by arguing on the door step for half an hour. We've been told, on competent authority, that the peddler gets ten cents more a pound than the grocer does for coffee of the same quality.

Let's get these two ideas: First, the peddler makes more profit on his entire line. Second, the coffee peddler would'nt last a minute if all the fine people who have the welfare of their own community at heart really knew the harm the peddler does to local business.

So we address this talk to the good folk who are just chock full of love for their home town, but who may not understand the peddler situation.

Well, the lady of our story sent the peddler on his way. She came up town and bought coffee at a local store. There are many good coffees for any one's choice, but in this case the lady happened to buy BLAINE'S STEEL-CUT COFFEE.

Hello Is an Old and Respectable Word

A need of the time is some plain and serious salutation, like "Hail, fellow," or "Good morrow, neighbor." Men of spirit are rebelling at the demure monotony of "Good morning, Mr. Jenkins." On the other hand, a professor of English takes us to task for using "Hello" as a term of greeting.

On top of which Miss Megan Lloyd George confesses that in America the never-failing "Pleased to meet you" left her at a loss for a response conformable to the local rubric.

She might have said, "Oh, are you?" Or she might have contented herself with "Really?" Or she might have been more loquacious and babbled, "So good of you to mention it." Or, had British reserve permitted, she might have taken the wind out of the other person's sails by retorting, "As for me, I'm simply transported at such an auspicious encounter."

But, not venturing to invent a formula, she stuck to her mild "How d'you do?" and wondered if she were transgressing American etiquette by not making verbal acknowledgment of the other person's profession of pleasure at the meeting.

An easy way to greet everybody is with a "Hello." But some persons consider that too informal. Despite professorial condemnation, "hello" is a word of old and respectable lineage. —New York Sun and Globe.

AUTOMATIC STORM SIGNALS

Mechanical Device Gives Warning to Electric Light Stations by Ringing a Bell.

The passage of a summer storm cloud over a great city means that there will be a very large demand made upon the electric light stations for increased current, says the Providence Journal. If the power and light generating station was not prepared for this call the industries of the locality would be greatly hampered and the complaints would be overwhelming, so that these situations must be anticipated.

Until recently it has been the custom to keep on the lookout for storms by posting an observer on the top of of the building and upon the approach of a threatening cloud the alarm would be given and the fires under the boilers would be forced, additional generators thrown into service and other preparations made to meet the emergency, and under the old system these preparations entailed considerable work in the way of notifying different departments, some located at some distance, by a rather elaborate system of calling or signaling.

Recently a mechanical means of accomplishing this has been arrived at. A little device near the desk of the superintendent detects the approach of a storm and gives the alarm by ringing a bell, intermittently at first and later more insistently, whereupon the superintendent gets up and going to the other end of the room moves a lever or two and touches a few electric buttons and the whole system has been notified to get ready for a storm.

MOTORIST IS NOT ALWAYS AT FAULT

Surprising Amount of Foolishness Enters Into Hurry and Bustle Seen on Streets.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

Trying to catch up with lost time is assailed as the fundamental cause of the majority of motor vehicle accidents. And any necessity for making up for this lost time is usually the result of procrastination before the start, it has been claimed.

Bustle and Hurry on Street.

It is really surprising the amount of foolishness that enters into the bustle and hurry we see on the street every day. And just think how much of it would be saved if each person followed a well-ordered schedule, if he planned just so much for one day, didn't put off a business engagement when its time on the schedule arrived, and didn't, on the other hand, try to do more in eight, nine or ten hours' time than it was sanely possible to do.

When you see a flock of pedestrians climb off a street car and chase recklessly across the street intersection to catch another car just starting for the crossing, just set it down that they put off starting from their home or offices too long. Many a man risks his life catching a street car. I've seen men even run diagonally across a street intersection to catch a car. It seems hardly fair to leave all the watching out for the motorist to do.

Driver Just as Bad.

Yet the motorist is just as bad as anyone at trying to make up for lost time. It is proved by his confessions in police court quite often. If you want further proof watch a late afternoon melee at any busy street crossing. You will see driver after driver whip past a car in front of him, trusting his less reckless fellow-pilots will keep out of his way. He overlaps the speed limit, maybe gets by with it but never catches up with the elusive minute. He should have started sooner.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

In engines not fitted with special valve stem guide bushings excessive wear of the guide and consequently valve stem side play and oil leakage may be prevented by reaming the guide and fitting a bronze bushing.

In case a rivet in the frame or other location is found to be broken, a very acceptable repair may be made by running a bolt through the rivet hole and clinching it with a nut on the other end.

When it is necessary to prime the engine on the road and no other means is at hand, a valve cap tied to a bit of string and lowered into the gasoline tank will bring up enough gasoline to prime one cylinder.

Eagles Battle With Panther on Mountain

As I was passing down a valley in southeastern Washington, writes a correspondent, I could see upon a mountain side two large eagles swooping at the back of a large tawny panther and stabbing him with their sharp talons. At first the big cat tried to outrun the birds, but they kept right along with him. Then he tried walking backward a few steps and then leaping up at the eagles, but they understood the trick and dodged him easily.

Presently one of the eagles lit on the ground and, half-walking, began flapping its wings as if it were hurt. The panther made a dive, but the bird evaded him, and he got another stab from the eagle in the air. Again the two eagles began their old game of darting down at his back every little while, and he seemed to realize that the best he could do was to make for shelter among some bushes half a mile away. But before he reached the place he frequently felt the sharp hind claws, which eagles use when fighting large enemies.

Had the fight occurred on the open plain, the panther doubtless would not have fared so well. As it was, the eagles had had fine sport at his expense. I think that no unarmed person could fight off a pair of eagles any more than the panther could.

How many eagles that panther has devoured, how many kits those eagles have carried to their lofty perches on the mountain tops, we cannot tell. If only half of the feuds and tragedies among the wild animals could be recorded, what interesting stories we should read! Some of the battles are fought for mere sport; some are fought to the death. I have watched deer and antelopes kill rattlesnakes. A deer will walk around the reptile a few times to get it to coil up; then the animal will step back a few feet and jump upon the coiled-up snake with all four of its sharp hoofs.—Youth's Companion.

Incandescent Lamp Is Used as Phone Receiver

An incandescent lamp can be made to act as a telephone receiver, and to accomplish this there is needed a metallic filament such as an Osram lamp of 100 candlepower. It is connected on a 120-volt direct-current circuit with the use of a self-induction coil. In shunt on the lamp is a condenser and also the secondary winding of a telephone transformer. On the primary end of the transformer is a five-cell storage battery and a microphone transmitter. Words spoken into the transmitter are reproduced by the lamp, thus giving a most novel effect. To explain this we may suppose that the telephone currents are added upon the direct current so as to give waves which cause the lamp to burn more or less brightly, according to the strength of the waves. This causes small changes of heat in the lamp that act on the glass and the air, so that a sound is heard. Thick glass stops the action, and it is best to use a 500 to 1,000 candlepower lamp with thin glass as this is most sensitive and gives the best sounds.

Good Points to Know

Several thicknesses of newspaper laid between the bedspring and mattress are equal in warmth to another mattress.

Combs should not be washed. Clean them by passing a soft cloth between the teeth.

If furniture is scratched, mix together equal parts of linseed oil and turpentine and paint over the scratches. As soon as they disappear rub briskly with a soft cloth.

To clean white enamel furniture wash it with warm soapy water, wipe as dry as possible, then polish with a dry cloth, upon which a little whiting has been sprinkled.

You can; but it doesn't do any good.

Lots to Do in New York

A visitor from the sunny South relates that two darkies working at his place paused in the middle of a hot afternoon to talk.

Said one: "I'm gittin' tired o' this job. I'm goin' away."

"Where you goin'?" inquired the other.

"I spec' I'll go to New York."

"Wha' for you goin' to New Yowk? You cain't do nuthin' in New Yowk."

"Yeah, I can. I c'n do mos' anythin' I wants to in New Yowk. I c'n go out and look at th' P'cific ocean if I cain't do nothin' else."

PLAN TO BLOW OUT DISEASE

British Doctors Will Use Trade Winds Against the Mosquitoes of Samoa.

Pacific trade winds will be used in an attempt literally to blow disease out of the Samoa islands, according to plans of Dr. Patrick A. Buxton, leader of the expedition of the London School of Tropical Medicine, which recently set sail for the South seas. Tuberculosis and other diseases threaten the extinction of the natives of the Samoa group of islands and it is thought their susceptibility may be due to a condition caused by a tiny parasite carried by the Stegomyia mosquito. This mosquito does not seem to be able to exist where the dense undergrowth is cut down. By cutting airways through the dense jungle so that the Pacific trade winds can blow through it, it is hoped that the insects will be blown away. An intensive attack, which will also include substituting modern cisterns for the hollowed coconut storage tanks which furnish breeding places for the mosquitoes, will be made first in one of the small islands of the group. The expedition is expected to be in the tropics for two years.
